1 PASSAGE GATE

Food begins to break down as soon as it enters the mouth, where it is chewed and swallowed.

4 TREATMENT

Enzymes in the Small Intestine break down large, complex food into simpler units to be absorbed in the bloodstream.
The Pancreas secretes digestive enzymes into the gut and hormones (including insulin and glucagon) into the blood.
The Liver, which is important for fat metabolism, produces bile and partially stores it in the Gall Bladder between meals.

ESOPHAGUS

STOMACH

SPLEEN

COLON

LIVER

SMALL INTESTINE

2 TRANSPORT

The Esophagus makes involuntary contractions to push the food to the stomach.

3 STORAGE & HANDLING

The early stages of digestion take place in the Stomach, where pepsin and lipase help with digesting protein and fat.

5 FINAL PROCESSING

The Large Intestine absorbs electrolytes and water. It's also where microbes ferment nutrients that have escaped digestion and absorption.

Omega-3 & 6 reduces skin irritation caused by allergies. Adding omega-3 & 6 supplements to your pet's diet decreases the inflammation-causing cytokines that can cause dry, flaky skin, helping to reduce excessive itching and scratching.

Tricalcium phosphate is a supplement form of calcium phosphate and is used to treat or prevent calcium deficiency. Calcium is primarily important for healthy bones and teeth. Calcium is naturally found in foods like dairy, nuts and seeds, and dark, leafy vegetables

Vitamin E good for dogs, it's an essential ingredient in dog food. Vitamin E is a fat-soluble antioxidant that supports dogs' bodies in their ability to neutralize free radicals in the cause of oxidative stress. Vitamin E for dogs promotes a healthy & shiny skin.

Biotin is often recommended for strengthening hair and nails, and it's beneficial for hair and skin.
